

Compugen Announces its Pathways to Unified Communications Program for Microsoft Office Communications Server 2007 and Microsoft Office Communicator 2007

A best-practices approach to enhancing the business value of your IT infrastructure.

Richmond Hill, Ontario — Oct. 16, 2007 — Compugen Inc., one of the largest privately owned Canadian systems integrators and IT services providers, today announced its Pathways to Unified Communications Program, which integrates Microsoft Office Communications Server 2007 and Microsoft Office Communicator 2007 with legacy telephony infrastructure to provide customers with a cost-effective, reliable pathway to a fully featured unified communications infrastructure. Compugen is a Canadian innovator in this growing marketplace, with significant Office Communications Server 2007 voice implementation experience through its participation in Microsoft Corp.'s early adopter programs, as well as vast experience with VoIP (Voice-over-IP) technologies from various vendors.

“Our customers come to us for high-quality solutions that offer the most up-to-date software along with low-risk methodology and a business-focused approach,” said Harry Zarek, Compugen’s President and CEO. “By working with Microsoft, Hewlett-Packard and other innovative manufacturers, we feel confident that our Pathways to Unified Communications Program will provide users of Office Communications Server 2007, Office Communicator 2007 and related Microsoft infrastructure with enhanced functionality and significant business value.”

“Compugen’s Pathways to Unified Communications Program takes advantage of Microsoft’s ability to make optimal use of existing telephony infrastructure to reduce costs and the messaging, voice and conferencing capabilities enabled by Microsoft’s unified communications products, giving customers significant communications benefits,” said Mandeep Bhullar, channel development manager, Unified Communications Group, at Microsoft Corp. “Microsoft is excited to work with Compugen to improve our customers’ experience and help foster better collaboration and productivity.”
